

Brexit makes it clear:

The European Union must be a democratic, a social and an ecological one.

We say

YES to a democratic European Union

where all inhabitants decide on their common working and living conditions. For this purpose, a constitutive process and a referendum on a Constitution for the European Union are necessary.

YES to a social European Union which unconditionally guarantees to every inhabitant all social basic rights, as e.g. the right to social security based on an unconditional basic income*, the right to freely chosen or accepted work, the right to affordable housing and to good water and energy supply, the right to public transport, to comprehensive health services, to child and elder care services, to education and culture, freedom of movement and the right of asylum.

YES to an ecological European Union which transforms the imperialistic economy menacing nature and men into an economy focussing on the satisfaction of human needs and the preservation of natural resources and foundations of life for future generations.

* Unconditional Basic Income (UBI) is an amount of money, paid on a regular basis to each individual unconditionally and universally, high enough to ensure a material existence and participation in society. UBI is a step towards an emancipatory welfare system. (Definition of Unconditional Basic Income Europe)
